

Bandsaw Blades

Record Power blades are manufactured in the UK to high tolerances using specialist premium high carbon steel. An exhaustive quality control process, featuring digital tooth profile checks and set analysis, result in blades which cut straighter and last longer than the vast majority of other blades on the market.

Choosing A Bandsaw Blade

Using the correct blade for the job is critical in achieving the best finish possible. The thickness and hardness of the material dictate which kind of blade to use. Thicker, softer material should be cut with a blade of lower teeth per inch while thinner, harder stock requires a higher number of teeth per inch. In general, it is good practice to aim for three teeth to always be in contact with the wood, so when cutting 1" thick stock, a blade with 3 teeth per inch is most suitable. Using a blade with too many teeth per inch will not allow for sufficient waste clearance, increasing the risk of burning the wood and creating a poorer quality cut. When cutting harder wood, a higher number of teeth per inch is required to achieve a better cut by eliminating splintering.
